I find this completely ridiculous as it has already been voted on. We teach children that they don't get what they want from throwing tantrums but allow adults to do so?!?

I have a special needs 5 year old that I will ABSOLUTELY NOT be sending to school if this policy is now reversed and masks are required. He missed a year of preschool for this exact reason.

Nobody seems to be thinking about all of the special needs kids that either can't wear masks or are frightened that every face around them is covered by a mask. Not to mention that these kids need to actually SEE faces to understand things.

Not to mention that this virus isn't going away. No amount of masks and sanitizer will wipe out a virus from the planet. That's science. Do y'all teach science anymore or just opinions?

If I could voice my opinion in person, I would but due to my special needs child I cannot be there.

Thank you for your time. Please leave the original decision in place.
